As a lifelong resident of Merrimack, I express great interest in serving this community, so that future generations can enjoy our rich history. I have always had a keen interest in the history of our town. When I was younger, I would pore over pictures and interviews from past residents. This passion never died down, though, and if anything, it grew stronger with time. This past year, in particular, my interest grew incredibly strong. I began playing cribbage at the library on Mondays to hear the stories of our older residents. They were so passionate and affectionate toward the town that it inspired me to propose a town flag in August. The project has become my child for the past several months, and I love that it teaches our residents something about this town.

Thus far in my life, I have not held any town office, seat, or the like. Although I have served as captain of Merrimack High School's Science Olympiad team for three consecutive years. My efforts have culminated in a berth in the national championship, one state title, and a third place state title. Managing the team is an incredibly intensive task that has taught me the importance of group contribution. With that knowledge in mind, I hope to bring my palette to the Heritage Commission and collaborate on a proliferation of projects. Currently, I am managing the town flag project and the Pynenburg Project. The Pynenburg Project has been a sole effort thus far, and will hopefully result in the acquisition of several thousand pictures, letters, and other artifacts of significance to our history. Working on this project has, and remains to be an engaging facet of my life.

I hope to join the Heritage Commission as soon as possible and remain in the group until my departure for college. I will consider remaining on the board if I attend a school in a neighboring state, and hopefully, that will be the case. With the unanimous support of the Heritage Commission comes a great level of confidence that my skills will be a valuable asset. Appointing me to the empty seat on the Heritage Commission would not only benefit me, but it would moreover help preserve the heritage of our beloved town.

With anticipation,

Sean C Sylvester
